NOMINATE NOW! THE D.R. CAMPBELL MERIT AWARD

Do you know someone on Campus who has made an outstanding contribution to Campus life beyond his or her normal role, such as initiating and developing a new event, publication, facility or program? If you do, then write a letter of nomination outlining why this person deserves to win the D.R. Campbell Merit Award.

The D.R. Campbell Merit Award was established by the Students' Council to provide recognition for students, faculty or non-academic staff who have made a significant contribution to improving the quality of life at Scarborough Campus. The award was first given in 1974 to Edana Hart and Robert Gardner, two students who co-edited Scarborough Fair. The most recent recipient was librarian Marla Miller, in recognition of her work with N'Sheemaehn, the Child Care Centre.

Submissions will be accepted by the Development & Public Relations Office, room S407, until Friday, March 5, 1993.

SCARBOROUGH COLLEGE RECOGNIZES EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

Terry Litovitz, a Senior Tutor in management, received the Scarborough College Teaching Award last year for her "tough but fair" teaching methods. According to students who supported her nomination, Terry Litovitz prepared them for careers in accounting better than any instructor they have ever had, and they were glad to support a formal recognition of her efforts through the Scarborough College Teaching Award.

Do you have a professor, lecturer, tutor or instructor at Scarborough who deserves special credit for his or her teaching? The Scarborough College Teaching Award was established by Scarborough College and the Alumni Association to recognize excellence in any of the following areas: classroom instruction, innovative teaching methods, supervision of research, educational development, course design, or individual advising and tutoring.

Nominations for the Scarborough College Teaching Award are being accepted until Friday, March 5. Please pick up a copy of the guidelines in room S409, the Principal & Dean's Office.

What do you like best about Scarborough College? What image best represents this Campus? What do you think makes it distinctive and sets it apart from other Campuses of the University or from other Universities in the province?

The Recruitment and Liaison Office wants to know and we will be asking you in March. We want to survey students, faculty, and staff, to find out what you think makes this campus special. Questionnaires and sample posters will be available in the Meeting Place March 5, 9, and 12, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:00 p.m.

Scarborough College needs its own poster and the information provided through the questionnaire will be used to develop a campus poster which will be mailed to every high school in the province.

If you have an idea for a poster and feel 1 picture is worth 1000 words, you might want to start photographing or sketching the campus. All pictures, drawings and ideas will be welcome. For more information contact Vicky Choy or Kim Richard at the High School Liaision Office, S 3031, 287-7563. Help us find the visual image that best represents this Campus.....and start snapping or drawing as the case may be!

Mosaic III: Tapestry
Maybe next year, maybe not.

by Jason Pasquale
Editor-in-Chief

"All the worlds a stage, and all the men and women mere players."

So said Shakespeare, and the Scarborough College Students Council tried to prove him right on Saturday night. Only in SCSC's version no one had their lines or blocking down.

Last Saturday night SCSC hosted its third annual Mosaic Show as the finale to Cultural Awareness Week. Dropped as the main focus was the fashion motif, though it remained one of the many acts. This year's theme was one of disorganisation, and that theme permeated the evening.

The show was well over an hour late getting started; after the wait many guests were ready to leave. Some did. Leaving the Meeting Place far emptier than was expected - even the reserved seats were sparsely occupied.

The various groups were introduced as if auditioning, a concept that grew as thin as the audience whilst the show went on to midnight. The strength of the 'rehearsal-concept' was that real errors could be thought to be part of the show, unfortunately, the flip-side was that there appeared to be a lot more errors than were probably really were.

Certain of the groups were far superior to others. One surprise was that it was often the larger groups that gave better performances. Some of the performers did feel jaded, pointing out that various acts had been done by professionals rather than students.

Overall, it appeared that what was needed was just one really good rehearsal to pull everyone together - unfortunately that rehearsal happened in front of the audience.

Estimated expenses for the single evening performance exceed $10,000, though the final figures will not be available for some time.

Mosaic III: A Celebration of Relations

Hunter Productions received $1,000 in honorarium for its segment in Mosaic III, according to SCSC sources. Mitzie Hunter, the owner is SCSC President Lance Flash's girlfriend.

According to one number cited by SCSC representatives Flash's good friend was paid $800 for taking photos.

It is unclear wether Flash's brother, Deon Flash, was paid for playing the piano this year.

Mosaic III: Moments to... remember?

Every time somebody tried to sing with a non-functioning microphone.

The dancers that did not realise that there was now a step in the runway -- it was not there before.

When the SAC President elect was brought up on stage whilecurrent SAC President Farrah Jinha and other SAC Representatives were left sitting in the audience.

Leaving mid-performance to find SCSC members Lance Flash, Pina Palma and Andrew MacDonald already in the hall and Pat Leo with his coat on ducking for a door. To be fair Evan Anderson had not shown up yet, and many other SCSC members were not to be found at all.

SAC Scalping Their Own for Spike Lee

According to confirmed sources SAC Vice-President Ferdinando Longo was scalping tickets to Spike Lee's speech at Convocation Hall last Monday.

Longo was selling his tickets for $20 (they retailed for $11). The tickets Longo was selling were alledgedly bought as SAC seats prior to their being put on sale to the rest of the student body.

Spotlight has its Plug Pulled

Spotlight is dead. According to two membres of its five member masthead Spotlight's Premiere issues of February 1, 1993 will also be its last.

Spotlight had been billed as the new, weekly, independent student Arts & Entertainment Paper for Scarborough Campus.

Editor-in-Chief Vanessa Daniel, was unavailable for comment. Sources cite poor financial backing and "personality conflicts" as the reasons for the papers short run.

Spotlight was published by Vanjandan communications, a new organisation. It is believed that Vanjandan went under with Spotlight.

Power Tripping, the Scarborough Way

Obsessive compulsive personalities seem to be Scarborough's answer to the cries of student apathy. Since so many organisations find themselves continually in need of support, and vacancies are a chronic ailment of student positions, those individuals willing to "double up" are frequently seen as saviours.

While SCSC Presidential candidates Burt Julal, Hans Cespedes and Pina Palma are competing for SCSC votes Palma is also running for a position on SCAA. Likewise Louis Tang's competition for SCSC Vice-President of Administration, Fiorella Sabadin, is running for President of SCAA. Palma and Sabadin are running mates in the SCSC election.

The difficulties of candidates running for the two elections has, apparently, not been faced by Scarborough Campus in the past. Initial problems will be in campaigning: Both organisations have limits on the amount of money that any one candidate can spend on campaigning and restrict the number and placement of banners and posters. These restrictions are meant to ensure fair competition between candidates that may possess different amounts of resources.

The question now arises: Do the multi-election candidates get to combine these resources? This process would double their campaigning limits in comparison to their competitors in both elections.

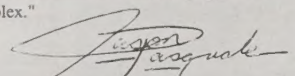
Even restrictions on which position must be cited would be ineffective as the "name-recognisability" of the multi-election candidates.

More importantly, what happens if these candidates win? If they only win one campaign will they bear a grudge against the organisation they lost out on throughout the upcoming year?

If they win both do they resign and leave one of the organisations devoid of leadership until by-elections can be held next September? Or will one resign from each and form a power block on two of the campus's most powerful student organisations?

And what if they try to keep both? Already questions are being asked about the seriousness of the contenders. Do they legitimately believe they are the best candidates for both positions? at the same time?

Quite simply, when is too much too much? How willing are these individuals to burden themselves? and how much are we, the student body willing to burden them? The recent incidents in our southern neighbours does show the possible ramifications of encouraging the "God-Complex."



"It's confusing, I don't understand the government. I find the timing rather ironic." said Farrah Jinha, SAC had cheese.

No Kidding! Fluffy has never understood lobbying Queen's Park and Simcoe Hall. How else do you explain telling Rae and Pritchard that students want tuition increases? How else do you account for the bumbling that has made headlines at the expense of student rights? And this was done to supposedly increase our representation at the bargaining table with the government?!

After squealing with delight that the boys and girls at Queen's Park were listening to her, she now complains that they aren't playing by the rules. How did such an idiot ever become the spokesperson for U of T students? Let's face it. The SAC prez couldn't win a GC election 3 years ago, and her only experience prior to her "election" as head cheese has been an appointment by SAC to the Academic Board where she was generally silent on issues. We are talking about a mandateless individual who only managed to squeak out a win after two tries in last year's election.

It is hard to believe that she honestly thought the NDP and Pritchard were going to give PFP serious consideration. The only things that have been implemented are the SAC-led tuition increases and removal of OSAP grants, and the SAC-neglected rise in incidental fees.

Way to go Fluffmeister!!! But, unlike her election, she won't have the chance to manipulate a second try at winning the underfunding issue.

Our money is being directly and indirectly spent and wasted by SAC through its pitiful attempts at lobbying. Heck, we're not even giving current students a job with these fee increases: Only professors and patronage positions are reaping the benefits of SAC's policies.

G. Lloyd Allison

You raise many valid concerns, unfortunately you cloud them with the personal attacks at Jinha. The fact remains that we elected Jinha, she is one of our representatives - but we all remain responsible for what happens to our University.

Do not Park Here --- or Else !!!

On January 14th, 1993, a funny thing happened to me on the way out from Beckers. I came out with a newly purchased chocolate bar in my hand and found a bright yellow parking ticket on my front windshield. Oddly enough every car parked along the perimeter of the parking-lot was ticketed. I went back inside and spoke to the owner of the convenience store and asked if it was a new store policy that everyone who shops gets a bonus $20.00 fine. He looked at me with amazement and shrugged. It turns out that he also received a parking ticket on his car. The amusing thing is that he pays approximately $300 dollars a year for this unwanted benefit.

Upon discussing the matter further, he admitted to me that it was the owner of the Highland Fish and Chips had asked the police to ticket everyone. It appears that the owner- who refused to give me his name- has done this on a weekly basis. I was surprised to learn that he does not own the property nor does he pay parking rental fees for the entire lot.

Frustrated, I went to the tavern next door and attempted to speak to the owner of Malibu's. His son indicated that his father was not on the premises and laughed when I showed him my parking ticket. To my amazement he had also received parking tickets in front of his establishment, even though his father pays $500 a year for parking.

Both the owner of Beckers and the son of the owner of Malibu's told me that the police officers who had ticked their cars had indicated that it was the owner of the Fish and Chips place who had called them. Both owners indicated to me that they had "discussed" this parking situation with the owner of the Fish and Chips restaurant. Both the owners of Malibu's and Beckers were vehemently opposed to the idea of ticketing customers- especially students- who represent the majority of their business. It was these very same customers that the Fish and Chips owner did not wish parking in the mall. Neither the owner of Beckers or Malibu's presently speak to the proprietor of the Fish and Chip's place because of his unwillingness to compromise and because of his "attitude problem" that led to the argument.

However it appears that the policy of no students parking in his lot-made by the Fish and Chips owner seems to me to be a little inconsistent. The owner of the Becker's store informed me that on a separate occasion he had seen two students of the same ethnic background as the Fish and Chip's owner, park in front of the restaurant and approach the owner. He then saw both students leave their cars and walk in the direction of the Scarborough campus. Approximately five minutes later- while the owner of the Becker's store was in the back accepting a delivery, every car in the parking lot was ticked- with the exception of the two students who had spoken to the Fish and Chips owner. The Becker's owner was amazed to see that although the Fish and Chips owner professed that he did not want University of Toronto students parking in front of his store, he obviously applied this inconsistently. I would recommend to all students not to frequent any establishment that discriminates against students in any shape or form.

Needless to say I am personally boycotting the Fish and Chips establishment. I have eaten there on one occasion prior to this incident and found the food and level of service to be well below what one would expect from a "fast-food" establishment and the prices above the average for a similar restaurant. Needless to say I will not return. However in conclusion I would like to send a friendly word of advice to the owner of the Fish and Chips establishment- spend less time harassing the customers about parking and more time learning how to run a successful establishment.

The Eighth Wonder of the World?

by Irmina J. Ayuyao
Underground Contributor

The Scarborough Bluffs is usually a place that just about everybody has visited at one time or another, be it on a class trip in grade school or a geography field trip in high school. Commonly, one remembers "The Bluffs" (as it is frequently called by resident-Scarberians) as a windy ledge with lots of rocks scattered below it.

Stretching 15 kilometres along its shoreline and rising 64 metres above the lake, this is a routinely overlooked natural wonder (don't you think it should be included along side with the Grand Canyon in Arizona and the Great Barrier Reef of Australia?); but then Scarborough has a reputation of being a place of incidentals. Thus it is fitting that the Bluffs is the focus of an exhibition currently on display at The Gallery.

Titled Points of View, it consists of conceptual illustrations by six established artists, centering around the Scarborough Bluffs. The purpose of the exhibition is to involve and encourage the public towards a "community dialogue," concerning the projects, before final approval is made by the Metropolitan Toronto and Region Conservation Authority Board, The City of Scarborough, and the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto.

Keep in mind that since the Scarborough Bluffs is the main focus of all the ideas, natural elements of stone and rock are fittingly utilized. Furthermore, all of the proposals are sensitive to the environment, they will not threaten the existing wildlife and plantlife.

The ideas range from beautiful to humourous, but all of them highlight the uniqueness of the landscape. Two examples from the exhibiton are by Mary Miss and Gary Dwyer. Mary Miss, who possesses 25 years experience in public art projects and has recently been commissioned to create an entryway for the Bay-Adelaide Center, proposes two intertwining footpaths for the Bellamy Ravine. The ravine has a limestone channel which drains surface run-off water, collected from storms, into Lake Ontario. The footpaths will be combined with the channel, thereby creating a route of sublime atmosphere, which can lead people from the forested top towards Lake Ontario at the bottom.

On the other hand, Gary Dwyer, an art landscape architect with 20 years experience, has put forth several proposals. One with a particularly humorous slant called The Bluffer's Park Gazette featuring a series of podiums with newspaper headlines mounted on them. Quirky headlines such as "Politician Kisses Bluffs" and "Alien Anti-Gravity Machine Saves Bluffs" serve to entertain and educate visitors from the different impressions people have of the Bluffs. A visitor would stand in front of a podium, read and then look up at the view, and just maybe for a brief moment feel a shiver up their spine and ask the Gods "why" it is such an overlooked natural wonder.

Come on people! Do not overlook this exhibition and try to get involved with the project, questionnaires are provided. Let us put this land we call Scarborough on the proverbial map.

Fear to the World: Eleven Voices In A Chorus of Horror

by Christie Okonkwo
Assistant News Editor

Despite his introduction's assumption, I did not buy, beg or borrow Kevin Proulx's book Fear to the World: Eleven Voices in a Chorus of Horror. However, looking pitifully at the book's front cover, I can assume that it was "liberated" (an appropriate word indeed!) from the dusky, crowded, mouse-infested (don't mean to scare you folks, do drop by!) offices of the Underground by the unsuspecting staff member whose familiarity with horror is far from extensive. (To say that I have remained rather indifferent to the literary world of horror and science-fiction is an understatement.) However, I did come to enjoy Kevin Proulx's book despite my ignorance of the genre and the book's somewhat dry composition.

The book is a collection of interviews with, you guessed it, eleven of the field's best known writers. The interviews were conducted over a period of eighteen months, from the spring of 1988 to autumn 1989. Some of the writers interviewed included Clive Barker, John Farris, Richard Christian Matheson and T.M. Wright.

Thoughts and feelings on evrything from censorship and the cathartic value of horror to the prospect of life after death invade the pages of this book to reveal an interesting, intimate look at horror's most proficient writers. Proulx does an amicable job of allowing the authors to speak for themselves on various aspects of their lives and literary styles. I can say that I was surprised (translation: relieved) to learn that the eleven writers interviewed did not spend their formative years in their parents' basements, consequently possessing the psychotic tendencies similar to Norman Bates. To the contrary, most of them were rather demure, down-to-earth individuals with modest pasts, successful presents and promising futures who possessed an epigrammatic manner that made "Fear to the World" (at best) bearable to read. Richard Christian Matheson was a particularly enthralling individual whose philosophy on such matters as life, death and faith proved to be extremely witty.

My only complaint with "Fear to the World" was its composition. I, enjoy the average, run-of-the-mill-fiction, or in some cases, non-fiction novel with one or more characters revolving around a plot or theme. Reading a collection of interviews does not automatically srtike me as interesting or fascinating. Coupled with my ignorance of horror fiction, I found it a little bit difficult to fully appreciate Proulx's book. Only true horror fans could read and admire the top notch effort put into "Fear to the World" and come to value the insight it has to offer in the process.

Despite "Fear to the World's" enduring qualities, I doubt there is anything in this novel that would attract anyone who is not an avid horror fan to read the collection of eleven interviews merely for pleasure. Then again, I can't fully comprehend what people find so alluring about fiction in general that makes them seek it out in the first place. However, in the words of R.C. Matheson, "But ...what the fuck. It works."

Henning's Health Hints

by Laurel Henning
Staff Contributor

This column has been very rare this year, for two reasons. First, the Health Educators Section of the Health Service has been active more than ever, with eight peer health educators now working with us. The addition of three student nurses from UofT last September has helped us to have a lot going on!

The recent week's focus on Safe Sex was fun and informative. Our special guest was Sue Johanson from Q107 and Rogers Cable T.V. Sue was sponsored by Berlex Canada Inc., manufacturers of the birth control pill Triquilar. Sue was a hit for sure, and I personally thought she was terrific; full of personality, knowledge and humour. I hope that the hundreds of students who heard her enjoyed it. I learned a lot too.

For anyone who did not have their questions answered, the sex health team from the Scarborough Public Health Department was by the Cafe last Thursday to address any concerns. We at the Health Service are very willing to help - we also have a collection of books which are great.

Sue left us copies of her books to add to our library, which students can borrow on request. The SCSC pub night on Thursday carried on from Spring Break Tuesday. Peer Health Educators gave away bottles with condoms and showed a video oriented around true scenarios in Daytona Beach.

I hope that wherever you went on the break, you had a safe holiday and avoided both sunburn and infections!

The other reason I don't write as much now is that one of our peer health educators, Shenif Ladak, frequently writes very informative articles related to health. I feel all of his topics are very well covered. In fact, the Life Section has been a wonderful addition to the paper - and the contributing writers and editor are to be congratulated.

Personally, I have not agreed with a couple of the questionnaires, but on the whole it has been a great year for health coverage, the best ever!

Keep up the good work!

The Doctor is Out

Eating Disorders

Why you shouldn't lose your lunch.

by Shenif Ladak
Underground Staff

How often have you looked around and wished you could look like someone else in a group? Is your greatest fear that of being fat? Are you an avid calorie counter? Are you constantly thinking about your weight? Do you experience a powerful need to get rid of the food you eat?

The society we live in is obsessed with being thin. Popular slogans such as "thin is in" and "you can never be too rich or too thin" have equated thinness with happiness. The result is that for the first time in history, being attractive means that one must be thin.

Compare our fashion models and Miss America with the voluptuous, substantial female figures of the Victorian Era. In fact, the women chosen for the Miss America pageant have shown a decrease in weight of over 7 percent over the last 15 years alone. Many women and men in our society are strongly influenced and shaped by these symbols and social forces.

In a 1984 Glamour Magazine survey, women were asked, "What would make you the happiest?" 42 percent of the respondents put weight loss at the top of their lists. Success in their careers ranked second at 22 percent, while a date with "a man you admire" followed close behind at 21 percent. Weight seems to have a significant effect on the self-esteem and happiness of these respondents and unfortunately, this has manifested itself in the extent to which eating disorders are currently a problem in Canada.

About 90 percent of all patients diagnosed as having eating disorders are women. This does not mean that men are immune from the problem. It is a physiological fact that during puberty, males gain height and muscle while females gain fat. Looking at this from an evolutionary standpoint, the female's extra fat and broad hips are supposed to act as aids in childbearing.

It is frightening that in this land of plenty, with our emphasis on nutrition, exercise, and health, that some of the brightest, most attractive young men and women are unhappy with their bodies and themselves and are resorting to futile, often dangerous methods to control their weight. This is done because they have the mistaken notion that they are overweight and that happiness will result if they only lose a few pounds.

Keep in mind that eating disorders just don't happen suddenly. Many complex factors put someone at risk. These factors include family, social environment, and pressures from others that one may or may not be able to resist. As well, remember that when dealing with a person who is suffering from an eating disorder to express your concern honestly and in a compassionate, supportive manner. In a private setting and in a non-judgmental, caring manner, discuss what observations you may have made that concern you. Patience is of the utmost importance as people with such disorders often deny their illness.

Recovery from an eating disorder is indeed possible. Treatment often entails a team approach utilising professionals from a number of different disciplines. If you or someone you know may be suffering from an eating disorder or if you would just like to discuss any concerns about your own eating habits or those of a friend, contact the Toronto Hospital's National Eating Disorder Information Centre at 340-4156 or the Scarborough College Health Service at 287-7065. Early intervention and help in changing harmful weight control patterns can ease recovery and prevent future problems.
